

Machine learning is a subset of artificial intelligence. It involves training algorithms on large datasets to make predictions and find patterns.